End of Life Assistance (Scotland) Bill

Anonymous

This is to express my personal dread that this bill or anything similar ever makes it to the statute book in this country. I am 70 years of age and have been in hospital several times where I have received excellent treatment. This loosely worded bill terrifies me because once the principal of deliberately ending life is accepted as a medical procedure I would never feel safe in hospital again. It is all very well to talk about it being voluntary but with an ageing population and a desperate drive for cuts we all know what it really means. I have a terminally ill sister just now who, because of her condition, would be easily persuaded to ask for this. What more when relatives are waiting for their inheritance.

No Thanks! Please make sure this bill is snuffed out before it snuffs us out!

Anonymous
7 May 2010