End of Life Assistance (Scotland) Bill

S Borokini

I do not agree that a person should be able to request end of life assistance from a registered medical practitioner because life is sacred, it is given by God alone and should not be taken by medical practitioner on request. It may be that the person has an incurable disease or disabling condition but that is not enough strong reason to end life because medicine is improving continually to help control the symptoms of diseases.

I am not satisfied with the requirements of age and connection with Scotland as set out in the Bill. Age does not matter. No one is qualified for assisted death because life belongs to God.

I work as a carer with the elderly. I observed that for quite some of them, when they are ill, if I asked them to seek medical assistance in the hospital, they will decline. Rather they prefer a home visit. Not that they are not mobile enough to get to the hospital but rather out of fear of the hospital, that they might die there. Imagine what will happen if such people learn about GP granting assisted murder.

I am not satisfied with the several stage consent and verification process that would be required to be followed for an eligible to receive to receive end of life assistance. It is spiritually wrong to provide assistance to end life. Death is inevitable, it will still come why assist it?

Everyone is of value to God and God loves everyone elderly, disabled or terminally ill. People should be cared for and not assisted to die. This bill is a threat to the current values of our society. We are a Christian society.
